EARTH'S OXYGEN FACTORY – FORESTS

Dr. Nakul Parashar

Forests are green, oceans are blue, keep the earth clean, for me and you. Don't be mean Go Green. Don't be sorry, do something more...

There are a number of such quotes and sayings that we have been hearing, especially more in number since 21st March, 2013 in particular. But why this date? This is when for the first time the World Forestry Day (WFD) or the International Day of Forests (IDF) was first celebrated all around the globe. The United Nations General Assembly officially proclaimed 21st March in 2012 as the WFD or IDF to celebrate and raise awareness of the importance of all kinds of forests around the world. Member nations of the UN have since then been encouraged to embark upon national & multinational activities and projects to promote the role of forests in our daily lives. This day has thus, become far more critical in the present day scenario. In form of climate change, especially when levels of oxygen have recorded a significant dip due increase in pollution, we all look toward the producers and providers of the perennial source of oxygen with a lot of hope and support. Cutting down forests or deforestation, on the other hand, have been recorded to go on unabated in various parts of the world. This is counter-productive to all those efforts that have been made to protect levels of oxygen from slipping down any further due to climate change. WFD or IDF is a UN initiative to discourage the act of deforestation happening in the name of modernization. Drives like planting new trees, and a number of other awareness programmes through all possible types of media --- print, electronic, social, and digital are put into action in a big way throughout the world on March 21st every year.

Interestingly, the idea of putting aside a day for forestry has been under discussion at various meetings of the United Nations since 1971. Finally, it was passed in a resolution in November 2012 at the General Assembly of the UN. It was due to the efforts of the United Nations Forum on Forests and the Food and Agricultural Organization (FAO) that jointly pressed upon the non-disputable importance of forests and the need to create awareness globally so that the growing menace of deforestation could be attended to. Besides the WFD, 2011 was celebrated as the International Year of Forests. During this year, a number of campaigns pressing on the need to grow more trees and spread awareness to fight against climate change due to deforestation were started. More and more trees were planted to demonstrate the all-time significance of the year of forests. Besides volunteers, shirts and other garments with slogans on them were worn by people. School and the general public were encouraged to visit where trees are in greater number provided serene surroundings to demonstrate the efficacy of forests as non-stoppable sources of oxygen. Workshops, conferences, and seminars in schools, offices and other workplaces were organized to create awareness about the importance of forests. Pasting banners and pamphlets on trees that may prevent

CAREER IN BIODIVERSITY CONSERVATION AND NATURAL RESOURCE MANAGEMENT

Kanchan Puri, Dr. Ritesh Joshi and Satish C. Garkoti

Environmental Science is a rapidly emerging area which requires a new vision of empowering youth about their nature and their role in conservation initiatives. It is now widely acknowledged that the sustainable development is the need of hour and thus responding to the growing environment crises (pollution, global warming, ozone layer depletion, acid rain, deforestation and desertification) in today's scenario. Sustainable development is development that meets the needs of the present, without compromising the ability of future generations to meet their own needs (Brundtland Commission, World Commission on Environment and Development). Applying knowledge gained through environmental science is the only way to solve these problems so that the environment, biodiversity, natural resources, wildlife etc. can be protected. The rapid urbanization of the environment needs to be studied constantly in order to avoid altering and damaging the environment

Environmental science is a multi-disciplinary field that integrates science related to ecology, biodiversity, biology, zoology, oceanology, limnology, soil science, geology and geography for the solution of environmental problems. It is a subject which connects us with our Mother nature. It gives understanding for the principles of environmental pathways and phenomenon related to environmental issues at global level. This subject involving the protection and conservation of our environment spans to a great extent.

Students study concepts related to conservation of energy, climate change, pollution alongwith technologies/strategies for the management eg. to treat air pollution, water pollution, noise pollution, industrial pollution, vehicular pollution and plastic menace. Today every corporate needs an environment officer to handle the environmental concerns of their production units, such as operating and maintaining waste water treatment plants, air quality monitoring, developing green belts, conducting energy & water audit. He/she can do Environmental Impact Assessment which is a process of evaluating the likely environmental impacts of a proposed project or development, taking into account inter-related socio-economic, cultural and human-health impacts.

A candidate with background in Environmental Sciences/ biodiversity conservation/natural resource management can understand the impacts of development on environment; can create awareness about environmental problems at local, national and international levels. In response to the increasingly complex challenges pertaining to people from cutting a tree, and similar movements like Chipko Movement were remembered.

Many great people including Mahatma Gandhi have said about forests – What we are doing to the forests of the world is but a mirror reflection of what we are doing to ourselves and to one another. Famous US President Franklin Roosevelt also said that a nation that destroys its soils destroys itself. Forests are the lungs of our land, purifying the air and giving fresh strength to our people. Gautam Buddha, who is said to have gained enlightenment under the tree also advocated about forests – The forest is a peculiar organism of unlimited kindness and benevolence that makes no demands for its sustenance and extends generously the products of its life activity; it affords protection to all beings, offering shade even to the axe-man who destroys it. Indeed, these are just a few of many sayings that we have all read and seen. Forests undoubtedly provide the most required bio-diversity to the globe, shelter to the flora and fauna, and play the most critical role in bringing rains to the earth thereby ensuring the retention of the fertility of the soil. The list of forests' offerings is just too long. Besides, flora and fauna, human beings too find shelter in forests. Modern researches have proven that forests are key to treat anxiety and depression. More than 25% of all world's medicines are generated in tropical forest plants. Summarily, more than seventy percent of the world's total economy is forest-dependent. Its wood-fuel energy provides more than forty percent of the total renewable energy of the world.

Yet, figures globally represent that every year more than 32 million acres of forest are lost. This thus, has put a number of associated benefits from forestry into extinction. In fact, the definition of forestry includes elements that are a part of social, political, natural, and biological sciences. It is the study that encompasses the creation, management, utilisation, conservation, and maintenance of forests and woodlands. Biodiversity and watershed which includes restoration and management of natural water, soil erosion, and much more. Forestry has thus, evolved into a full-fledged stream of education. A number of agricultural universities in the country run undergraduate and post-graduate courses with specialization in different streams of forestry. Wood science & technology, medicinal & aromatic plants, plantation technology, agroforestry, forest genetic resources, forest biotechnology, watershed management are some of the popular streams of specialization offered at the post-graduate level for those wanting to pursue forestry as their career. Dehradun-based Forest Research Institute is one of the oldest institutes in the country that has been dedicated to the development & teaching of forestry in the country. Besides, IIFM Bhopal and agricultural universities of repute like the GB Pant University of Agriculture & Technology (Uttarakhand) YS Parmar University in Solan (Himachal Pradesh) are some of the leading organizations that carry out degree courses in various branches of forestry. Globally, in Germany (Wetterau, Hesse) in the year 1787, the first formal & dedicated school of forestry was established by George Ludwig.

In India, Indian Council of Forestry Research and Education (ICFRE), established in 1986 is the country's largest research & development agency as an autonomous institute under the Ministry of Forests and Climate Change. Located at Dehradun (headquarters), Shimla, Ranchi, Jorhat, Jabalpur, Jodhpur, Bangalore, Coimbatore, Allahabad, Chhindwara, Aizawl, Hyderabad, and Agartala, the council has nine research institutes and four research centres.

For a forester or silviculturist (someone who practices forestry), forestry is quite a lucrative career. For countries like Germany where forests cover more than one-third of the area, forestry supports more than a million jobs, and in turn, more than 180 billion euros annually come through forestry. India too has potential for forestry in terms of employment. Besides the coveted IFoS (Indian Forests Service), a number of industries that thrive on wood require foresters. Paper, furniture, and those involved in the infrastructure industry employ foresters. Besides, a number of positions are advertised from the academic industry where researchers and teachers, and communicators are sought. As a part of the Agricultural Extension, a number of foresters are hired by various government and non-government organizations. According to some sources, this area shall see projected growth in the employment of foresters higher than the average for all occupations during the current decade. This has emanated from a number of fire-related risks that forests have witnessed all over the world. From a salary standpoint, the annual emoluments of a forester are comparable to a number of highly sought-after jobs in the country.

“We, the present generation, have the responsibility to act as a trustee of the rich natural wealth for the future generations. The issue is not merely about climate change; it is about climate justice.”

While India's forest cover is inching towards 25% of the total land, target to cover thirty-three percent of the total landmass of the country is yet another major initiative of the Government of India. In this effort, the common man has certainly done his bit. One such example is Jadav "Molai" Payeng, an environmental activist and forestry worker from Majuli in Assam. This 58-year old person has planted several trees over the decades on a sand bar of the river Brahmaputra. His untiring efforts have resulted in a forest reserve thereby calling him the Forest Man of the Country. Such examples thus inspire youngsters to take up forestry and do their bit for society, mankind, and nature.

Awards and glories to Payeng do help in encouraging people to come forward and take up the noble cause of working towards the conservation and restoration of forests. There are a number of awards that ICFRE announces every year for people who contribute significantly in the domain of forestry. At the international level, Marcus Wallenberg Foundation in Sweden gives away the Marcus Wallenberg Prize or the MWP to those working in the area of forestry. As per MW Foundation, the purpose of this award is to recognize, encourage and stimulate pathbreaking scientific achievements which contribute significantly to broadening knowledge and to technical development of importance to forestry and forest industries. MWP is considered to be one of the most coveted awards in the world.

Summing up, forests are an ongoing natural source of oxygen, and that too in such abundance that none of the artificial or man-made sources combined can ever compete with them.

COMPREHENSION

Directions : In this section, you have few short passages. After each passage, you will find some items based on the passage. First, read a passage and answer the items based on it. You are required to select your answers based on the contents of the passage and opinion of the author only.

Passage-I

Mankind's experience of various evolutionary changes from primitive times to the present day has been extensive and varied. However, man's problems were never before as complicated as they seem to be today. Man's economic activity centres primarily around production. Labour is said to be the primary factor of production; its role, therefore, has been given a lot of importance. It should be useful to have an overall view of the economic history of man-from the nomadic times to the modern factory system-and study its relevance to the various labour problems of today.

Initially, man passed through the hunting and fishing stage'. During this period, his basic needs were adequately met by Nature. Wild animals, birds and fruits satisfied his hunger, and his thirst was quenched by the waters of springs and rivers. Caves gave him shelter and barks of trees were used as clothing. During this stage of man's progress, labour problems did not exist because of the absence of any economic, political and social systems. Then came the pastoral stage', which was marked by a certain amount of economic activity. The nomadic and migratory nature of man persisted, and, together with his goats and cattle, he moved on to fresh pastures and meadows. Some conflicts would sometimes take place among herd-owners, for, during this period, the institution of nominal private property ownership was not known.

This stage paves the way for 'the agricultural stage', during which the class system began to develop. There was a small artisan class mostly self-employed; and there were also landed proprietors or Zamindars as well as slaves. Thus, arose the feudal system. During the fourth stage of these developments, the handicrafts stage', a number of social and economic changes took place which marked the beginning of the labour problem in the world. The self-sufficient economy of the village underwent a drastic change. The community of traders and merchants emerged.

Q104. Humanity's evolution from primitive stage to the present- has been

- (a) static and smooth
(b) huge and diversified
(c) always violent
(d) always peaceful

Opportunities

Based on the student's interests and specializations, one can choose to work in diverse career opportunities emerging in this fast growing field. These courses in Environmental Sciences and related fields (like biodiversity conservation, natural resource/environment management, forestry, ecology etc.) can lead to gain knowledge and skills needed to solve environmental problems which is very essential in the present day scenario. A Master or Doctor degree holder can get a good position/ job according to their knowledge and experience in various National and International organizations like Pollution Control Boards; Water Resources and Agriculture; Public Institutions and Private Industries; Colleges and Universities; Ministry of Environment, Forests and Climate Change; Department of Environment, Embassies and other Inter-national organization related to environment. Careers in these Natural Sciences are so varied and offer immense job opportunities that it is difficult to consider them under one category. Environmental consultant, Environmental education officer, Environmental Manager, Nature Conservation Officer, Waste Management officer, Water Quality Scientist, Professors, Environmental Modellers, Environmental Engineers and Environmental Journalists etc. are some of the positions available.

In the final year of Post-Graduation, students have to complete a dissertation on some research problem and in fact this is a trigger to develop interest and curiosity among students towards new environmental issues. Students can specialize in many different areas such as Environmental biology, Atmospheric science, Oceanography, Environmental engineering, Conservation ecology, Environmental chemistry, Geology and Geography. They can narrow their focus to areas of particular interest during the course of study. Therefore, this should be done based on the current environment problems and interest of the students. Similarly, Ph.D. students need to be encouraged to choose current environmental problems for their research work. This will be helpful for them to explore new areas and in getting new job opportunities. The learner may go for further higher education programmes, e.g., M. Phil, Ph. D, M. Tech and other professional programmes.

Environmental Science: Multi-disciplinary subject

The word 'Environmental Science' incorporates within it several activities for the protection of the environment. Popularization of such courses needs to be conducted and promoted so as to build a green brigade which will definitely help in solving the emerging environmental crisis.
